INDEX.

A

ABUSE, the neceſſary requiſites for it in an author, page 51. The ſucceſs of it in puffing, 580.

Actors and Actreſſes, decayed ones, a propoſal for erecting an hoſpital for their reception, 954.

Addiſon, his 93d Spectator recommended, and why, 652.

Advertiſements for Wives, the great modeſty of them, 484.

Advertiſement, a remarkable one, for aſſembling a ſociety of ſervants, 1074.

Affectation, the ſource of folly, and the juſt object of ridicule, 721.

Age, the preſent one better than any other, 449. Why railed at, 450. Clamours againſt the preſent, altogether erroneous, 1181. To what principally owing, 1182.

Alexandrian Library, its inſcription, 420.

Allegory of Felicia and Bonario, 63. Of Proſperity and Adverſity, 503. A Labyrinth in Apollo's garden, ſo called, and why, ſee Parnaſſus.

Almanac, an excellent treatiſe of practical aſtronomy, 844.

Alphabet, petition of all the letters of it except E and O, 1080.

Alteration, the firſt principal of an Improver, 456.

Alterative medicines, the ſurprizing power of them in morality as well as phyſic, 1010.

Amanda, her hiſtory, 311. Conſequences of its publication in the World, 318.

Ambition, the folly and madneſs of it, illuſtrated by example, 1043.

Ambition, falſe, the fatal conſequences attending it in perſons of low condition, 1121.

Amorous Divines, why called ſo, 116.

Amuſement, the principal deſign of a public paper, 624.

Ancients, their boaſting, 7. Their ſuperiority over the moderns in expenſive dinners, 121. The ſkillfulneſs of their cooks, ibid. Unacquainted with the cure of the king's evil, 144. Their ignorance in the art of making thunder and lightening, 498. Their imperfect notions of honour, 678.

Anger, inordinate, the fatal conſequences of it, 1175. The excuſes for it falſe and groundleſs, 1176. Such as are addicted to it juſtly termed mad-folks, and to be dealt with accordingly, ibid. Who moſt addicted to it, 1177.

Animals, the inhumanity of tormenting them, page 1140.

Annihilation, the thougnt of it how terrible, 439.

Anti gallicans, their premiums for encouraging the manufacture of thunder and lightening, 501.

Antoine, his amour with Clarinda, 476.

Apollo, his royal palace deſcribed, ſee Parnaſſus.

Apprentice, the farce ſo called, Mr. Fitz-Adam's recommendation of it, 953.

April fool-day, in danger of loſing its influence by the alteration of the ſtyle, 58.

Arachne, her character, an inſtance of a bad temper, 756.

Architecture, how improved by the mixture of the Gothic and Chineſe, 356.

Art of not knowing people explain'd, 277.

Artiſts, ancient, how nobly rewarded, 716.

Artiſts, modern, how ſhamefully neglected, 717.

Arts, their affinity to manners, 467.

Athenians, their paſſion for novelty, 701. Their extravagance in theatrical entertainments, 702.

Auricular orthography, its uncertainty, 608. Miſtakes occaſioned by it, ibid.

Author, his long-ſuffering, humility and temperance, 119. Not abſolutely and at all times an object of contempt, 344.

Authors, Engliſh, an encomium on them, 825.

Authors, modern ones, a propoſal for erecting an hoſpital for their reception, 954. Adviſed to get themſelves hanged to procure a ſale for their works, 1040.

B

BACON, lord, an obſervation of his, 7.

Bagnio's, their connection with the theatres, 53.

Ballad-ſingers, who, their ancient and reputable ſociety a uſeful branch of the community, 893.

Batchelor, ſtory of an old one, 51.

Bath, miraculous cures performed there by the World, 424.

Bawd, the addreſs and behaviour of one, 584.

Beau-monde, the inventors of unintelligible writing, 145.

Beauty, artleſs, its peculiar charms, 629.

INDEX.

Beaux, their Character, page 818.
Bedlam, a view of it, 137. The contemplation of it how humiliating, ibid. Abuſes of it, 138.
Belinda, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, on the reaſonableneſs of ſelf-painting, 656.
Belphegor, or the married devil, tranſcript from it, 576.
Bentley, doctor, a quotation of his on the ſudden death of an old bridegroom, 307.
Birch, the efficacy of it in reſtraining travelling, 132.
Birth, the notion of it examined, 683. Great birth, noble birth, birth and no birth at all, the true meaning of thoſe expreſſions, 684.
Blameleſs, Rebecca, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 318.
Blanche, Olivia, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, on the reaſonableneſs of ſelf-painting, 658.
Blockhead, an affected one deſcribed, 722.
Bloods, their character, 818.
Boileau, his remark upon French opera's, 588.
Books, phyſic of the mind, not food, 419. Their different effects on different conſtitutions, 420. A meditation among them, 840.
Bookſellers, the patrons of learning, 119. Suſpected of intereſted views, 120.
Bragg-table, an aſylum againſt the paſſions, 249.
Breeches-maker's lady of Brentford, her boaſt in the ſtage-coach, 289.
Bride, diſappointed of an old one, 199.
Broken heart, a diſeaſe not mentioned in the weekly bills, 183.
Bromwick, Mr. advice to him, 388.
Bucks, what, 140. Propoſal for erecting an hoſpital for them, ibid. Their brutality owing to the negligence or fondneſs of their parents, 177.
Burlington, Earl of, a ſaying of his on the rebuilding of St. Paul's, 301.

C

CADMUS, the inventor of letters, 145.
Cancns, for the toilette, 472.
Cantabrigius, his character, 556.
Carbuncle, Dr. his character, 543.
Card-playing, the pernicious cuſtom of it expoſed, 1062. Sunday the moſt convenient day for that purpoſe, and why, 1075.
Cards, the abſurdity of fretting at them, 38. The playing at them for trifles innocent and uſeful, 41. The grand inducement for people's coming to town, page 627. Their allegorical meaning, 1003. The intended duty to be laid on them taken into conſideration, and by whom, 1074.
Care, not to be got rid of by aſpiring to greatneſs, 1048.
Carte, Mr. the hiſtorian, his knowledge of Somebody, 144.
Cecil, Sir William, his letter to Sir Henry Norris, 453.
Celimena, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 235.
Cento, on Shakeſpear's birth-day, 1077.
Charles the ſecond, his zeal for the propagation of wantonneſs, 252.
Charity public, the vanity of it expoſed, 1021. Poſthumous, no ſuch thing in nature, 1024.
Chaſtity in a wife, an over-value for it apt to make her forgetful of the other virtues, 345.
Cheating, in all vocations excuſable, and univerſally practiſed, 1104.
Cheberiſtany, princeſs of the Genies, her marriage with the king of China, 239. Her reaſonable requeſt, 240.
Chineſe ornaments, all of our own invention. 72.
Chriſtmas, how obſerved by our anceſtors, 625. Why neglected at preſent, 626.
Chriſtmas-holidays, the revolutions occaſioned by them, 595.
Church, cuſtom of going to it in the days of chriſtianity, 125.
Cibber, Mr, his attempt to reform the ſtage, 33. Ill-treated by a barbarous age, ibid.
Cicero, his declaration concerning Plato, 529.
Civility and Good-breeding, not ſynonimous terms, and why, 887. Both properly defined, 888. England the moſt perfect ſeat of Civility though not of Good-breeding, 890.
Clarinda, her amour with Antoine, 476.
Clariſſa, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 178.
Club, the jollity of one how diſturbed, 254. Deſcription of one, 540. Character of its members, 541.
Company, good and bad, their perpetual warfare, 752.
Concealment, its great help to fancy, 471.
Confectioner, a ſaying of one, 35.
Conſequence, the vanity and affectation of being a man of that character, 797.
Conſtancy, and the diſintereſtedneſs of the men in affairs of love and marriage, 869.

Converſation,

INDEX.

Converſation, the abuſes of it, page 564.
Cooks, of the ancients their great ſkill, 121.
Cooper, Mary, her account of Mr. Fitz-Adam's fall from his one-horſe chair, 1253.
Country-church, the ſleepers at it, who, 382.
Country-couſins, their great awkwardneſs in town, 984.
Country family, melancholy turn of one, 596.
Country races, detrimental to the nation, 101.
Country-ſeats, a propoſal to exclude day-light from them, 118.
Courts, the ſeats of Good-breeding, and why, 889.
Coxcomb, the ſymptoms of one, 529. An affected one deſcribed, 722.
Critics, their nature and office, 8. Their favourite terms what, 727. Their courts of judicature greatly crowded, and why, 728.
Criticiſm, a diſeaſe, 190. Cauſe of it, 192. How cured, 194.
Cuckold, a ſaying of one to a lady in the park, 49. His character vindicated from contempt, 345. To be held in eſteem from the reſpect we owe to great men, 346.
Culverin, Colonel, his character, 542.
Curate of York, his hiſtory, 184.
Curioſity, the greateſt deſtroyer of female honour, 925.
Cuſtom, definition of it by a late noble author, 671. Its prevalence in regard to language, 996.

D

DAVIS, MAJOR, his duel with Ralph Pumpkin, 409.
Deaf, dumb, and blind, the advantages of being ſo, 2.
Deafneſs, the principal qualification of a hearer, 339.
Death, the contempt of it to what owing, 438. Thoſe people the moſt averſe to it who have the leaſt enjoyment of life, and why, 440.
Decorum, how expreſſed by the Greeks, 1134. Recommended more particularly to the fair ſex, 1136.
Defamation, againſt the dead unaccountable, 1038.
Demoivre, his calculation of good huſbands and wives, 127.
Deſſerts, our great improvements in them, 34.
Detraction, happineſs derived from it, and how, 768.
Devil, let looſe among us by the repeal of the witch-act, page 203.
Dialogue, ancient and modern compared, 567.
Dictionaries, of the Florentine and French academies, their riſe and perfection, 600. Thoſe of the Engliſh on'y word-books, 601.
Dictionary, Engliſh one of Mr. Johnſon conſidered, 599.
Diſſimulation, ſometimes a virtue, 254.
Diſintereſtedneſs, of men in affairs of love and marriage indiſputably illuſtrated, 869.
Dodſley, Robert, his preferment, 47.
Doll Common, her advice to Falſtaff, 595.
Double entendres, the great utility of them, 1205. Their ill effects on old maids, 1208. Are productive of falſe modeſty, 1209.
Dreamers, waking ones, their number inconceivable, 1017.
Dreams, of Parnaſſus, &c. See Fitz-Adam.
Dreſs, the index of the mind more than the face, and why, 1212.
Drinking, an acquired, not a natural vice, 552.
Duel, a remarkable one in Moor-fields, 283. A more remarkable, between a man of diſtinction and a dog, 680.
Duelling, the abſurdity of it ridiculed, 677.
Dulneſs, the prieſteſs of Apollo, how daily employed, 730.
Duties of ſociety, our refinements upon them, 620.
Dying, the folly of it, 143. How to prevent it, ibid.

E

E and O, the petition of all the other Letters in the alphabet againſt them, 1080. Bad conſequences of the game ſo called, 1083.
Ears of perſons of quality, how formed, 279.
Eating, how improvable by the encouragement of learning, 121.
Education, an unlearned one, the diſadvantages of it, 118. Ancient and modern education compared, 177. A plan for the education of our Britiſh youth, by ſending them to China inſtead of France, 1231.
Effeminacy in men, the affectation of it ridiculous, 351.
Egyptians, their deification of vegetables. 270.

Electrical

INDEX.

Electrical engine, cures performed by it, page 499.

Electrical experiments, how beneficial to the manufacture of thunder and lightening, 498.

England, its superiority in politeness to other nations, 618.

English, their behaviour abroad, 133.

English dictionary, by Mr. Johnson, its utility, 603.

English language, its progress over Europe, 602. Various and unsettled orthography of it, 608.

Englishman, old one, an ode under that title, 992. Modern one, its contrast, 993.

Entertainments theatrical, of the Athenians, their extravagance, 702.

Envy, her ingenuity, and in what it consists, 649. Its implacability, 1038.

Epaminondas, a saying of his, 437.

Epitaph of a moral atheist on himself, 440.

Eton-school, a custom of it, 131.

Exercise, better paint for the ladies than rouge, 117.

Experiments, modern, what, and the wonderful utility of them, 845.

Extinguisher, the use of it how to be extended, 332.

Extinguishing-office, a proposal to erect one in this metropolis, and what, 330.

F

FABLE, of Jupiter and the inferior Deities, 1092. Of Jupiter's lotteries from La Motte, 724. Of labour, health, and contentment, 861. Of Modesty and Assurance, 9. Of the old man, the boy and the ass, 78.

Fair youths, their endeavours to appear manly, 351.

Falstaff, his reply to Doll Common, 595.

Family interest, frequently the Destruction of family estates, 436.

Fardilla, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam on the reasonableness of self-painting, 655.

Fashion, preferred to elegance and grace, 301. Its effects on the understandings of great people, 569. a defence of the fair sex on their acting up to the dictates of it, 745. the dominion of it sometimes to be opposed, 762.

Feeble, lord, his character, 541.

Felicia and Benario, an allegory, 63.

Finical, lord, a description of his library, 385.

Fitz-Adam, Mr. his quack advertisement, 4. His advertisement to the wits, page 6. His high opinion of himself, 8. His great discovery, 166. His indulgence to the administration, 197. His intention to nail horseshoes at certain people's doors, and why, 207. His vindication of great people, 279. His adventure in the Windsor stage-coach, 289. His good opinion of the present times, 293. The great utility of his labours, 294. Ingratitude of the public to him, ibid. Neglected by the ministers, 295. Imposed upon by a correspondent, 318. His great lenity, 425. Misrepresented by his enemies, 427. His thoughts of annihilation, 439. His belief that the millenium is near at hand, 535. His petition in verse to the  of . 538. His character of a fellow collegiate of his, 543. His account of a modern symposion, 545. His instruction to the society of syphons, 555. His vindication of Italian opera's, 587. His proposal to Mr. Johnson for a neological dictionary, 610. His great pleasure in vindicating the honour of his country, 617. His reasons for declining serious essays, 623. His advice to the ladies on their painting, 634. His remarks on the numerous societies for the propogation of eloquence, 637. His plan for writing history in taste, 641. His essay on neighbourhood, 647. His account of the progress and reception of his paper, 667. Its great utility in curling of hair, 670. His disinterested zeal for the service of the public, 693. His opinion of masquerades, 698. His account of old and new Ranelagh, 699. His dream of mount Parnassus, 727. His dream on the fatal effects of the misapplication of parts, 786. His general invitation to his correspondents to transmit to him pieces of scandal and politics, 828. His scandalous story, 833, His hints for the removal of the spleen, 858. His congratulation to the ladies on the approach of winter, 875. His recommendation of a particular lotion or wash for their faces, 879. His dissertation on good-breeding, 887. His account of ladies of fashion, men of fashion, and odd creatures, 905. His visit to Sir John Jolly, 918. His dissertation upon servants, 941. His protest against absolute nakedness in the fair sex, 947. His vindication of of Pythagoras's doctrine of the tranſmigration of ſouls, page 977. His character of Metaſtaſio, as an Italian poet, and his recommendation of a well-conducted Italian opera, 1027. His reflections on defamation and envy, with his inſtructions to modern authors, 1037. His converſation with a whimſical vicar, who deſpiſed everybody that was unhealthy, 1056. Is reprimanded for aſſerting card-playing to be an innocent and uſeful amuſement, 1063. His viſit to ſir Harry Prigg, 1067. His diſſertation on the frailties and imperfections of human nature, 1091. His complaint againſt the French hair-cutters, 1098. His propoſals to the government, 1100. His vindication of a man's cheating in his vocation, 1103. His diſſertation on decorum, 1133. His reflections on the inhumanity of tormenting dumb creatures, 1139. On the abſurdity of ſuch as conceal their virtues for fear of being ridiculed, 1151. His remarks on the force of cuſtom and example among the French, 1153. Inconveniencies that have attended him on account of his ſuperior wiſdom, 1163. His diſſertation upon anger, 1175. His reflections on the falſe clamours againſt the degeneracy of the age, 1181. His remarks on the genteel Mania, 1193. His diſſertation on double entendres, 1205. On the dreſs of a ſoldier, 1211. His plan for the exerciſe of the paſſions, 1217. His fall from his one-horſe chair, 1254. His warning to great men, 1255. His requeſt to be buried in Weſtminſter Abbey, 1256. His monument and epitaph, 1257.

Fitz-Adam, Mrs. her aptneſs to interpret judgments, 553.

Fleming, Charles, the viſiting highwayman, his conformity to the manners of the great world, 622.

Flirtation, birth and meaning of that word, 607.

Folly, the chace after it like hunting a witch, 427.

Frankly, Mr. his courtſhip to the widow G, 463.

French, their unpoliteneſs, 620. Vulgar behaviour of their highwaymen, ibid. Their method of writing hiſtory, 641. Rules to be obſerved, 642. Exceed the Engliſh in good-breeding, and why, 890.

French Academies, the danger of ſending our youth to them, 369. French Faſhions introduced into England by Q. Elizabeth, page 453. French Hiſtorian, his obſervation on the Engliſh who were in poſſeſſion of Aquitain, 554. French Operas condemned by Boileau, 588. French Hair-cutters, detrimental to the ſale of the WORLD, 1098. French Politeneſs, what, 1154.

Frettabit, Suſanna, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 371. Frettabit, Toby, his method of ſhortening a viſitation, 376.

Fretters, women ſo called, 38. Their behaviour at an aſſemblée in Thames-ſtreet, 39.

Future, miſtaken anxieties about it, 595.

Fuzz, explanation of that uſeful word, 607.

G.

GAMING, a national virtue, and why, 1086.

Gaming Act, a propoſal for one in imitation of the game act, 414.

Gardener, the qualifications requiſite to be an adept in his profeſſion, 714.

Gardening, the effect of it in England, 85. Its faſhion in the reign of K. William, 86. How altered by Kent, 87. The modern mode of it how beneficial to the public, 707.

Gardens of More Park in Hertfordſhire, particularly taken notice of by Sir William Temple, 708. A beautiful one planned by Milton in his fourth book of Paradiſe Loſt, 709.

Garrick, Mr. his refinement on Mr. Rich, 32. Adviſed to turn Harlequin, and why, 53.

Gaſcony, the intendant of, his deſſert, 36.

Gédoyn, abbé, his amour with Ninon L'Enclos, 171.

Genteel, fatal effects of appearing ſo, 1195.

Genteel company, their peculiar taſte for double entendres, 1207.

Gentleman, or man of honour, what, 296.

Germans, their diſcoveries in medicine, 144.

Glaſtonbury-thorn, its infallibility, 57. Propoſal to regulate the ſtyle by it, ibid.

Gonzaga, Lucretia, her letter to her houſe-keeper, 81.

Gonzales de Caſtro, his ſtory, 1.

Good, nothing to be accounted ſo that does not contribute to happineſs, 518.

Good-breeding and Civility, not ſynonimous terms, and why, 887. Both properly defined, page 888. The moſt perfect degree of civility, how only to be acquired, ibid. England not the moſt perfect ſeat of it, 890. Recommended to young gentlemen as an eſſential part of education, ibid. The bounds of it preſcribed, 891.

Good-humour, the moſt neceſſary virtue in a wife, 242.

Good man, what, 613.

Good ſort of men, what, 251.

Good things, a tax propoſed on the ſaying them, 1224.

Goths and Vandals, their ſimplification of the ideas of honour, 296.

Goths, their refinement in manners, 672.

Great men, their dinners how exhilerating to authors, 120. Loſers by ſhutting their doors againſt learned men, and why, 121.

Greatneſs, the curſes attending it, 1047.

Greeks, an unpolite people, 619.

Grey fryars, of the order of St. George, their abſtinence and devotion, 164.

Growlers, men ſo called, 38.

Guardian, the authors of that work how impoſed upon, 625.

Guzzle, Sir Tunbelly, his character, 541.

H

HANDSOME MEN, their diſadvantages, 347.

Handſome women, their inviolable friendſhips for each other, 320.

Happineſs, only conſtitutional, 91. Difficulty of obtaining it, 166. The art of it illuſtrated, 755. The Royal Game of it, 1003. Rules and directions for playing it, 1034.

Harlequin, his indelicacy, 260.

Harmony, a favourite term among the critics, 727.

Hats, the indecency of ladies wearing them at church, 179.

Health, how beſt to be ſecured, 860. Deſtroyed, if not accompanied by labour and contentment, ibid. The bleſſings of it, 1059. The only riches worthy of regard, 1059.

Hearers, the great demand for them, 325. The neceſſary qualifications of a hearer, 326. Deafneſs the principal one, 339.

Hearty, Francis, his letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 254.

Heaven open to all men, title of a book, to what compared, 238.

Henry the fourth of France, his paſſion for the ducheſs of Valentinois, 169.

Henry the eighth, the firſt introducer of maſquerades, page 699.

Hermetic philoſophers, very numerous in town, 661.

Herodotus, his obſervation on thick and thin ſculls, 1250.

Hieroglyphics, the uncertainty of them in writing, 144.

High birth, how to be diſcovered in a lady's complexion, 246. Its privilege, 487.

High life, its reſemblance to low life in its diverſions and taſte, 569.

Hilarius, his character, an inſtance of the miſapplication of words, 812.

Hiſtory, French, the method of writing it, 641. Rules to be obſerved, 642.

Holdfaſt, Prudentia, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 245.

Honeſt gentlemen, a name for hard-drinkers, 553.

Honeſty, a great help to beauty, 952. Obliged to be incog, and why, 998. The appearance of it of ſome uſe, 1107. The practice of it proper for perſons of no vocation, 1108.

Honnetement, the expence of appearing ſo, 107.

Honour, its proper ſignification, 295. Complex ideas of it ſimplified by the Goths and Vandals, 296. Its true meaning, what, 675. Miſunderſtood by the ancients, and why, 678. The import and dignity of the term, 996. A lady's honour, what, 998.

Hoops of the ladies, a uſe found out for them, 333.

Horſes, Engliſh, how valuable abroad, 101.

Hoſpitals, their coſtly buildings and utility, 1019. The vanity of the benefactors expoſed, 1020.

Huſband, the head of his wife, how, 241. His unfitneſs to govern himſelf, 242.

Huſbands, good ones, fewer than good wives, 127.

I

I. the impertinence of that letter, 1131.

Jacobite, a female one dangerous, unleſs ugly or an old maid, 244.

Jacobites, their zeal and ingenuity, 147.

James the ſecond, a ſaying of his to his courtiers at St. Germains, 45.

James the firſt, his touching for the king's evil, 144. Corroborated by the ingenious Mr. Carte, ibid.

INDEX.

James, Dr. the efficacy of his powders, page 143.
Jeffreys, Mr. his engravings for the masquerade, 700.
Jew-bill, anxiety to repeal it, 400.
Jews, not to be prayed for at church, and why, 259.
Improver, his cruelty to the visitor, 456.
Indifference, the most unhappy situation of marriage, and why, 769.
Indiscretion, applied to the conduct of a lady, what, 234.
Infidels, the prayers for them at church offensive to the modesty of people of fashion, 259.
Inoculation, the practice of it ironically opposed, 762. Arguments drawn against it from the great success it has met with, 763.
Insensibles, their character in prose and verse, 935.
Johnson, Mr. the public how obliged to him for his dictionary, 600. Excellence of his plan, ibid. Difficulties of reconciling the polite to the grammatical part of our language, 605.
Jolly, Sir John, his character, 918.
Irish, their expostulations with the dead, 143.
Irony, the danger of its being mistaken, 625.
Italian operas, their innocence, 587. Their drowsy effects conducive to the keeping of good hours, 590. The disinterestedness and condescention of their performers, ibid.
Italians, their forms for writing letters, 81.
Julio, his letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 31.
Jupiter, his lotteries, from La Motte, 724.

K

KENT, Mr. the Calvin of our reformation in gardening, 34.
Kept mistress, story of one, 581.
Kisang, Mr. a Chinese upholsterer, 229.
Kitty, miss, her behaviour to a colonel of the guards under Westminster bridge, 235.
Kneller, Sir Godfrey, a story of him, 302. His reply to Mr. Pope, 303.

L

LABYRINTH, in Apollo's garden at Parnassus, by what name distinguished, and how revered by the ancients, 728.
Ladies, their pursuit of nature in their dress, 34. How to be benefitted by their encouragement of learning, 121. Their undressing to go abroad, 127. Their sovereignty over their husbands serviceable to the state, 243. Their severity to a fallen sister, 320. Their discreet behaviour to their lovers, 321. Their great civility to the seducers of their sex, 322. The defects of their education an advantage to them, and why, 568. The inventors of the genteel part of our language, 603. Their natural turn to the copiousness more than to the correctness of it, ibid. Their eloquence in vituperation, 606. Their indignation and love how productive of new words, 607. Modern ladies, less reserved than those of the ancients, 746. To what owing, ibid. The good effects of their freedom and indulgence, 747. Their mechanism correspondent with that of a clock, 1049.
Lady of fashion, the qualifications requisite to constitute one, 905.
Language, the immediate province of the fair sex, 607. Various fashions of it, to what owing, 614.
Last-day, a beautiful description of it by a modern poet, 975.
Learning and virtue, cause and effect, 118. Solid learning, so called by our forefathers, a useless accomplishment, 915. Modern learning, far preferable to it, and why, ibid.
Legacy, a remarkable one of a late grocer to his wife, 960.
Leonardo da Vinci, an observation of his, 472.
Letter, from a country curate, on borrowing money of a friend, 13. From Julio, on our approaches towards nature, 31. From H. S. on the present passion for Chinese ornaments, 67. From an officer in quarters, requesting that the paper of the World may have some religion in it, 73. From a clergyman, desiring it may have no religion in it, 74. From Philologos, complaining of its inaccuracies, ibid. From A B in praise of its inaccuracies, 75. From Tom Tell-Truth, complaining of the story of Mrs. Wilson, 76. From a lady, commending the story of Mrs. Wilson, ibid. From Amicus, requesting grave papers, ibid. From Dourillac, desiring light ones, 77. From Lucretia Gonzaga to

to her houſe-keeper, page 81. From Maximilian, emperor of Germany, to Margaret, ducheſs of Savoy, his daughter, 84. From the lady Ann, widow of the earls of Dorſet and Pembroke, to Sir Jos. Williamſon, ibid. From York, giving an account of the rector of South-Green and his wife, 92. From R. D. giving the hiſtory of a tour to Paris, 104. From J. T. on romances, 111. From H. M. on the connection of learning and virtue, 117. From Coſmophilos, giving advice to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 124. From John Softly, on the proper obſervation of Sunday, ibid. From S. L. on the nakedneſs of the ladies, 126. From Eton ſchool, on travelling and playing truant, 129. From P. P. on the abuſes of Bedlam, 137. From J. T. giving an account of three monaſteries lately erected in this town, 160. From R. D. on the behaviour of his ſon abroad, 172. From G. D. at Rome to his father, 173. From his governor to the ſame, 175. From Clariſſa, on the ladies wearing hats at church, 178. From W. S. on the injuſtice of her lover, 180. From W. B. giving the hiſtory of his misfortunes, 184. From B. D. on the malady of criticiſm, 190. From a bride of fifty-ſix, complaining of her diſappointment, 199. From Nic Limbertongue, containing his hiſtory and qualifications for a correſpondent, 208. From Ruſticus, on the art of killing ſummer in the country, 214. From Mary Truman, on the miſeries of a toad-eater, 220. From Samuel Simple, deſcribing his houſe in the country, 227. From Celimena, on the fatal conſequence of her paring her ſtays, 235. From Prudentia Holdfaſt, on the undutifulneſs of her nephews and nieces, 245. From Sophia Shuffle, on the dangers and temptat ons of a country life, 246. From Francis Hearty, on the dulneſs of his club by the admiſſion of a member of fine breeding, 254. From Philoceſmos, 257. From J. M. adviſing the omiſſion of the prayer for Jews, Turks and Infidels, 259. From S. W. on pantomimes, 260. From a correſpondent, on pride, 263. From W. R. in vindication of poſts, 269. From P. B. on the ill-breeding of great men, 275. From Abraham Adams, on the art of not knowing people, page 277. From Mary Muzzy, on the exploits of her family, 281. From one of the quality of Brentford, 292. From a correſpondent, on the various reaſons for coming to town, 299. From Amanda, containing the hiſtory of her ill-uſage, 311. From Rebecca Blameleſs, 318. From Winnefred Bobbin, 319. From A. B. propoſing an extinguiſhing office, 329. From a deaf welchman, deſiring to be recommended to the poſt of hearer, 335. From S. H. on the diſadvantages of male beauty, 347 From a correſpondent, on the diſcouragements to taſte, 353. From O. S. on the cuſtom of giving vails to ſervants, 359. On the encreaſe of robberies in this metropolis, 365. On the miſchiefs of ſending youths raw from ſchool to French academies, 369. From Suſanna Frettabit, on the word viſit, 371. From L. M. on the neglect of the mind, 378. From L. A. on lord Finical's library, 383. From M. B. on the ruling paſſion of women, 395. From I. T. on taſte, 400. From Mary Muzzy, on the farther exploits of her family, 407. From J. H. on the ladies high heels, 413. From W. X. propoſing an act to qualify gameſters 414. From A. Z. with an extract from the life of the marquiſs of Ormonde, 415. From a ſervant, requeſting that no more letters be publiſhed againſt vails, 417. From A. B. on the phyſic of the mind, 419. From Sir William Cecil (afterwards lord Burleigh) to Sir Henry Norris, 453. From the widow A. G. on her behaviour to her lovers, 461. From Philoceſmos, on the agreement between arts and manners, 467. On putting romances into the hands of young ladies, 473. From A. B. deſcribing the maid's huſband, 479. From Sarah Meanwell, on the dreſs of her elder ſiſters, 485. From M. A. complaining of her ſituation among the great, 486. From E. L. on the clamours againſt the alteration of the ſtyle, 491. From M. D. on the art of making thunder and lightening, 497. From a young bride, on her huſband's viſiting his uncle in Berkſhire, 509. From T. H. in the triple capacity of parſon, author and cuckold, 512. From Philanthos, on the cultivation of flowers, 515. On the degeneracy of the times, times, page 527. On mediocrity, 569. From M. A. on the oppoſite characters of two ſiſters, 572. From a young woman in keeping, on her ſeduction and penitence, 581. From A. Z. on the melancholy turn of a country family, 596. From C. D. on the neceſſity of an annual vocabulary of new words, 611. From A. B. on the pretenders to Oratory, 635. From Circumforaneus, on the ſame, 640. From Humphry Gubbins, on his viſit to a friend in town, 653. From Fardilla, on the reaſonableneſs of ſelf-painting, 655. From Myrtilla, on the ſame, 656. From Belinda, on the ſame, ibid. From Olivia Blanche, on the ſame, 658. From A. Z. on the hermetic philoſophy, 660. From Prudentio, on Maſquerades, 695. From T. M. on the folly of engaging in a learned profeſſion without fortune or intereſt, 736. In defence of the fair Sex, 745. On the ſimilitude of Solomon's virtuous wife and a modern fine lady, 774. From B. D. on the idle expence of elections for parliament, 775. From A. B. on the proſtitutions of characters given in behalf of bad Servants, 777. From M. S. on the neglect of female Merit, 779. From Priſcilla Croſs-Stitch, on Nankin-Breeches, 782. From a lady, on the belief of a providence, 806. From W. M. on the confuſion of our ideas by the abuſe of words, 809. From R. L. on the utility of noiſe, 816. From A. C. in commendation of the Engliſh language, and Engliſh authors and tranſlators. 823. On the wonderful advantages ariſing from modern Experiments, 845. From C. D. on the preference of PURL Roman to PURL Britiſh, 849. From W. B. on nothing, 850. From a huſband, on noiſe, 851. From a wife, on the ſame, 854. From a mother, on the ſeduction of her Daughter, 864. From M. B. on the conſtancy and diſintereſtedneſs of Men in affairs of love and marriage, 869. Advice to ſcribblers, 882. From T. D. on Ballad-ſingers, 893. On noſe-jewels and noſes, 900. From Neo-Academicus, on ancient and modern learning, 911. From Thomas Baſſoon, on the murders committed by news-writers, 929. From Philonous, on the Inſenſibles, 935. From A. Z. propoſing an hoſpital for decayed actors and actreſſes, 954. From Thomas Hearne Jun. on pennance, 959. From L. M. on eating healths, 965. From C. B. on the deſolation of Liſbon, page 973. From T. L. on the ladies cutting off their hair, 983. From A. W. on country couſins, 984. From E. P. recommending the eating as well as drinking of healths, 987. From a correſpondent with a couple of Odes, called the old and the modern Engliſhman, 991. On honour and honeſt, 995. From J. T. on the Royal game of happineſs, 1001. From Academicus, with his method of curing the vices, 1007. From From S. B. on the nakedneſs of the ladies, 1013. From L. L. on advertiſements, 1015. From A. S. on dreamers, 1017. On the behaviour of an Aunt, 1021. From J. T. with his farther remarks on the Royal game of happineſs, 1031. From A. B. on the folly of ambition, 1043. On the dreſs, voice, and elocution of a modern lady of faſhion, 1049. From C. Y. on card-playing, 1061. From M. C. on her daughter's want of taſte, 1064. From C. L. with his propoſal for the wants of all mankind to be publicly known, 1073. From a correſpondent with an advertiſement on the Card-duty, ibid From Mary Tape, propoſing a Sunday's aſſembly, 1075. From G. H. on the wonderful effects of quack-medicines in the deſtruction of rats and mice, 1076. From Jack Lovebox, on the advantages of gaming, 1087. From Ephraim Minikin, &c. requeſting a repeal of an act for pulling down London-bridge, 1101. From Thomas Tamedeer, on his wife's fondneſs for her father, 1109. From W. B. on his advertiſeing for an agreeable companion in a Poſt-chaiſe, 1115. From P. Laycock, on the genteel names of his ſiſters, 1121. From A. Singleton, propoſing an army of ladies, 1128. From W. on the letter I. 1130. On general ſatire, 1145. From C. D. on his adventure with his maid, 1155. From John Anthony Triſtman, propoſing a receptacle for Suicides, 1157. From H. M. on his diſtemper called pedigree, 1169. From Timothy Loiter, on One's-ſelf, 1187, From Nicholas Novel, on gentility, 1197. On levying a tax on the ſaying of good things, 1223. From C. recommending a tour to China, inſtead of France, 1229. From T. Z. on the vexations of gallantry, 1235. From George Meanwell, on the diſagreement of his ſervants, 1242. From C. P. on on the humours of her uncle and aunt, page 1247. On thick and thin ſculls, 1250.

INDEX.

Letters of the alphabet, their petition againſt E. and O. 1080.

Library, a diſcription of lord Finical's, 384

Library-paper, inſtructions to Mr. Bromwich, how to make it, 388.

Life, the enjoyment of it neceſſary to a preparation for Heaven, 442.

Limber-tongue nice, his letter and hiſtory, 208 Abſtracts from his other letters, 333.

Link-boy, his petition to Mr. Fitz Adam, 444.

Liotard, his behaviour to a lady who painted herſelf, 630.

Little people, their proſperity to ſpeak evil of dignities, 280.

Lomatius, Paul, his treatiſe on the artificial beauty of women, 948.

London, its over-grown ſize, the cauſe of the increaſe of robberies and murders, 367. The grand inducement to viſit it, what, 627.

Love, the great cordial of life, 167. Old women the proper objects of that paſſion, 168.

Louis, the 14th. his attachments to Madame de Maintenon, 169. His greateſt glory that of making the French language almoſt the univerſal one, 602.

Luxury of the Romans, only imitated, not equalled by the preſent age, 121.

M

MAC-LEAN, Mr. the highwayman, his great honour and politeneſs, 621.

Mac-Manus, Phelim, his complaint againſt painted faces, 631.

Magazines, of knowledge and pleaſure, wherein of ſervice to the public, 914.

Maid's huſband, deſcription of him, 480.

Malefactors, how to be made ornaments to their country, 393.

Man of honour, a true one, what. 295. Modern acceptation of that character, 675.

Man of ſenſe, incompatible with a a man of faſhion, and why, 569.

Man of quality, not always a man of faſhion, ibid. Inſtanced in a noble lord, ibid.

Mania, genteel, what, and its various appearances, 1193.

Mankind, how improved in morals by the circulation of the WORLD, 534.

Manners, their affinity to arts, page 467.

Maſquerades, the morality of them, 445. Innocent in themſelves, and only dangerous from the gaming table, 698. When, and by whom introduced, 699.

Matches, thoſe the moſt happy that are moſt equal, 870.

Mathematician, the great diſcoveries of one, 597.

Matrimony, its moſt unhappy ſituation, what, 769.

Matron, a venerable one in Covent-Garden, her invitation to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 443.

Maxim, Lady, her remark on the Pantomime of the Genii, 33.

Maximilian, emperor of Germany, his character, 82.

Meanwell, George, his letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, on the diſagreement of his ſervants, 1242.

Medicines, alterative, their ſurpriſing power in morality as well as Phyſic, 1010. Quack ones, their wonderful effects in deſtroying rats and mice, 1076.

Meliſſa, her character, an inſtance of a good temper, 756.

Men, their extreme delicacy made amends for by the manlineſs of the women, 352.

Men of faſhion, who, 906.

Men of ſpirit about town, what, 140. Propoſals for erecting an hoſpital for their confinement, ibid

Metaſtaſio, Signor, his unſucceſsful attempt in his Opera's, 589. His character as a writer, 1027.

Metropolis, a large one, the great evil of a nation, 367.

Micio, his character, 405.

Middle ſtation of life, the happieſt, and why, 569.

Minds of the polite world, ſtarved for want of ſuſtenance, 378.

Moderns, how obliged to lord Bacon, 7. Their baſhfulneſs, 8. Superior to the ancients in the art of healing, 142. Their infallible method of curing the king's evil, 144.

Modeſty, of young gentlemen of faſhion, 3.

Modeſty, falſe, the effect of double entendres, 1209.

Modeſty, and aſſurance, a fable, 9.

Monaſteries, an account of three of them erected in this metropolis, 161.

Money, the mortification of borrowing it, 16.

Monro, Dr. his ſcheme to prevent the contagion of criticiſm, 192.

Montaigne,

INDEX.

Montaigne, an obſervation of his, page 91.
Moon-light, lady Betty, her propoſal to Mr. Fitz Adam, 446.
Moor, Sir Thomas, his jeſt upon the ſcaffold, 438.
Morning, an ode to it, 759.
Morocco, natives of that country, their regard for horſes, 102.
Motto's, Greek and Latin ones, ſatisfactory and entertaining to thoſe who do not underſtand them, 5.
Murderer. a jeſt of one at the gallows, 438.
Muzzy, Mary, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 281. Her ſecond letter, 407.
Myrtilla, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, on the reaſonableneſs of ſelf-painting, 655.

N

NAKED, the difficulty of painting it, and why, 470.
Nakedneſs, of the ladies, emblematical of their innocence, 128. Mr. Fitz-Adam's proteſt againſt abſolute nakedneſs, 947.
Nankin-breeches, complaints againſt them, 783
Natural philoſophers, the great improvers of our manufactures, 497.
Nature, our approaches to it, 32. In dreſs, 34. In gardening, ibid. In deſſerts, ibid. More impartial than generally thought to be, 720. Deviation from her often attended with ill conſequences, always with ridiculous ones. ibid.
Nature, human, its fickleness, 1092. Illuſtrated by a fable. ibid.
Neceſſaries, what, 434.
Neighbour, the character of a good one, 651. Of a bad one, 652.
Neighbourhood, various ideas entertained of it, 647. The duties of it, what 652.
Neological Dictionary, its uſe, 610.
Newmarket races, deſcribed, 96.
News, the genuine food of the mind, 420.
Night, the various employments of it, 443
Ninon l'Enclos, her amours from the age of fifty ſix to eighty, 170.
Noiſe, the various advantages ariſing from it, 817.
Noſe-jewels, recommended to be worne by the men, 900
Noſes, their various kinds, and which of them fitteſt to be rung, ibid.
Novelty, the paſſion firſt univerſal, page 701. The Athenians peculiarly fond of it, ibid.
November, its gloomy effects on men's minds, 594. England always undone in that month, ibid.

O

OBEDIENCE of wives, only a temporary command, 241.
Obſcenity, countenanced at the table of a late great man, and why 566.
Odd people, who, 614. No people of faſhion, and why, 906.
Ode, to night, 447. To morning, 759. The old Engliſhman, 992. The modern one, 993. On Sculpture, 1200.
Old Batchelor, ſtory of one, 50.
Old maids, their diſlike to double entendres, and why, 1208.
Old women, the proper objects of love, 167.
One's-ſelf, a very impertinent viſitor, 1187.
Opera's, Italian, their innocence and uſefulneſs, 587. Thoſe of Metaſtaſio particularly conſidered, 1027.
Oratory, the pretenders to it expoſed, 635.
Ormonde, marqueſs of, his adventure with a French nobleman, 415.
Orthography, of the Engliſh language, its uncertainty, 606.

P

PALMYRA, ruins of it, the merit of thoſe prints, 380.
Pantomimes, their dignity and uſefulneſs, 53. Not altogether perfect, 260. Wherein faulty, ibid. Obſervation of a perſon of quality upon them, 261.
Paris, a tour to it, 104.
Parizade, ſtory of her from the Arabian tales, 432.
Parliament, frequently the ruin of a country Gentleman, 436.
Parliament of Paris, its ill-breeding, 618.
Parnaſſus, Mr. Fitz-Adam's dream of it, 726.
Parſon, not abſolutely a character of contempt, and why, 342.
Parthenilla, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 149. Her Platonic amour with a captain of dragoons, 150.
Paſchal, Monſieur, his remark on hunting, hunting, page 551.

Paſſions, expedients for the proper uſe of them, 1218.
Patches, their encreaſe in ſize, 429. On what parts of the body to be worne, 430. How to be made an honour to the ſex, ibid.
Patrick, the footman, his Nankin-breeches, 782.
Paulina, Lollia, her appearance at a ſubſcription maſquerade, 121.
Pearl-powder, the expence of it in painting the face, 630.
Pedantry, the characteriſtic of the laſt age, 557. How abſurdly avoided by the preſent, 558.
Peremptorineſs, in converſation, a great abuſe of it, 564.
Perſons of honour, different from Men of honour, 298.
Perſons of quality, naturally ſhort-ſighted, 279. Miſtakes occaſioned by it, ibid.
Philalethes, his character, 405.
Pierot, his indelicacy, 260.
Plato, the excellence of his ſympoſion, 539.
Platonic philoſophy, its reception in the World, 565.
Play, the great advantages of it to the ladies, 249. Definition of that ſcience, 397. Deep play, a great violation of decorum in the fair ſex, 1137.
Pliant, Sir George, his character, 512.
Poetry, how improved by the fair ſex, 606.
Poets, their various claſſes deſcribed, 726.
Police, a French term, not to be tranſlated into Engliſh, 1133.
Politeneſs, definition of it, 618. French acceptation of it, 1151.
Politics, its bad influence on ſociety, 566.
Pompon, a deſcription of one, 108.
Pope, Mr. a ſtory of him, 303.
Poppæa, the wife of Nero, her warm bath, 122.
Poſts, their uſefulneſs to mankind, 270. How eſteemed by the ancients, 271. Their averſion to drunkards, 272. Their cruelties to the blind, atoned for by their ſervices to the lame, 273.
Poverty, the only cure for luxury, 451.
Powder, grey, to be uſed only by young ladies, 109.
Practitioners, in Phyſic, their diſintereſted zeal for the ſervice of the public, page 689.
Prejudice, not always an error, 672. To be connived at ſometimes, though an error, ibid.
Pride, the ſource of almoſt every guilt and miſery, 265.
Prigg, Sir Harry, his character and plan of retirement, 1068.
Procraſtes, his tyranny, 426.
Profeſſion, the folly of engaging in a learned one, without fortune or intereſt, 736.
Projector, hiſtory of one, 329. His ſcheme for an extinguiſhing office, 330.
Proſperity, and adverſity, an allegory, 503.
Providence, the folly of complaining againſt the prevailing ſyſtem of it, 791. The ſame, farther conſidered, 803.
Prudentio, his letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, on the danger of maſquerades, 695.
Prudes, a deſcription of them, 906.
Public paper, the difficulties of conducting it, 317.
Puffing, the benefit of it, 3. Abuſe the moſt ſucceſsful way, 580.
Pumpkin, Ralph, his exploits and death, 407.
Pumpkin, Sir Joſiah, his character and hiſtory, 281.
Pythagoras, his doctrine of the tranſmigration of ſouls vindicated, 977.

Q

QUACK-MEDICINES, their wonderful effects in the ſpeedy deſtruction of rats and mice, 1076.
Quakers, their policy, 289. From whence borrowed, 320.
Quality of Brentford, 289.
Queen Elizabeth, the firſt introducer of French Faſhions into England, 453.
Quickly, Mrs. her advice to Fallſtaff, 595.

R

RACE-HORSES, their pedigree, how attended to, 100.
Races, at Newmarket, conſidered, 96.
Rake, an affected one, deſcribed, 721.
Rambling, propoſals for an act againſt it, and what, 133.
Ranelagh, old and new, deſcribed, 699.
Rat-catchers, their policy, 427.
Reformation, the general one, brought about about by the paper of the World, page 534.

Rhetoric, a propoſal for the eaſy way of teaching it, 635.
Robberies, the increaſe of them in London, to what owing, 367.
Robbing, the good-breeding introduced into that ſcience, 620.
Rochefaucault, an extravagant maxim of his, 431.
Romances, the preſent age over-run with them, 111. Heroic ones, written above nature, 112. Modern ones, written below nature, 113. Judicious ones, a pleaſing way of inſtructing, ibid. None to be licenced, except ſtamped Fielding, &c. 115.
Romans, their unpoliteneſs, 619.
Rouge, the conſequences of uſing it, 110.
Ruſticus, his letter on the art of killing ſummer in the country, 215.
Ruzvanſchad, his marriage, from the Perſian tales, 239.

S

SATIRE, general, bad conſequences of it, 49. Its abſurdity, 1145.
Scarfe, Dr. how treated by the widow G. 464.
Scarlet Fryars, of the order of St. James, their numbers and characters, 165.
Scott, Sir Thomas, his epitaph, 800.
Scribblers on glaſs, their various claſſes deſcribed, 882. Thinking recommended to them, 886.
Sculls, the texture of them, to what owing, 1250.
Sculpture, an ode, 1200.
Secondat, Monſieur, his opinion of the cauſe of corruption, 366.
Seconds, in a duel, on what conditions to fight, 286.
Self-flattery, the ape only of ſelf-love, 723.
Self-love, its aſtoniſhing powers, 688. A natural and uſeful ſentiment, if kept within bounds, 723.
Self-painting, epidemical, 630. The preſent ſtate of it in its ſeveral degrees, ibid.
Seneca, an obſervation of his, 50. Another, 523.
Seneſino, his puerility in the character of Alexander, 33. His alarming behaviour in that opera, 589. What happened to him in Rinaldo, 33.
Senſual love, the proper objects of it, who, 167.
Sentiments, the practice of toaſting them how commendable in young ladies. 490.
Septuaginary, fine gentlemen, an affected one deſcribed, page 722.
Serioufneſs, the unpoliteneſs of it, 472
Serjant, his advice to his Enſign, who was beating him, 6.
Servants, the neceſſity of their having vails, and why, 363. Their good and bad qualities generally to be aſcribed to their maſters, 522. Their faults ſometimes to be cured by good uſage, 525. Characters given in favour of bad ones a great grievance, 777. Their enormities, to what owing, 941.
Sevigné, Madame, the pattern of eloquent writing, 80.
Sexaginary widow, an affected one deſcribed, 723.
Shakeſpear, a Cento on his birth-day, 1077.
Shoe-cleaning, a more reſpectable profeſſion than that of an Author, 344.
Shuffle, Sophia, her letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 246.
Sign-poſts, their utility, 273.
Silent people, their uſefulneſs in company, 540.
Silly fellow, what, 613.
Silly woman, what, ibid.
Simple, Samuel, hiſtory of his wife and country houſe, 227.
Simplicity, the principal excellence in all the performances of art, 154. Its effects conſidered in painting, 155. In architecture, 156. In muſic, ibid. In writings, 157. In dreſs, 158. In morals, 159.
Siphon, or Soaker, a calculation of his exceſſes, 555.
Siſters, oppoſite characters of two, 572.
Sitfaſt, Will, his character, 543.
Skittle-grounds, in gentlemen's gardens, complaints againſt them, 536.
Smart, Mr. his addreſs and reply to the widow G. 463.
Soaker, his character, 553. Conſequence of his exceſs, 554. Diſſection of one, ibid.
Society, the deſire of ſhining in it a great preſervation of it, 564. Injured by the excluſion of women from inſtructive converſation, 568.
Softly, John, his letter to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 124.
Solomon, his virtuous wife, the ſame with the modern fine lady. 774.
Sombrinus, his character, 811.
Somebody, how cured by Somebody of the king's-evil, 144.
Song, 466.

INDEX.

South-green, rector of, and his wife, their history, page 92.
Specifics, unknown to the ancients, 143.
Spirit, its superior excellence to matter, 154.
Splen, the poem so called, a truly original one, 858.
St. Giles's, society of, the r secretary's invitation to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 445.
Stage-coach, the vanity of those who travel in it, 290.
Stuarts, family of them, for what remarkable, 205.
Style, new, the inconveniencies of it, 57.
Suicide, a plan for erecting a receptable for it, 1161.
Summer, how to make it endurable in the country, 215.
Sunday, the abuse of it, 124. Instituted as a day of rest, 125. Intention of it preverted by going to church, ibid. Lying in bed the only way of keeping it, 126.
Swift, Dr. the greatest master of irony, 489.
Symposion of Plate, its excellence, 530. A modern sympoſion described, 545.

T

TACITURNITY, the dignity of it in old times, 323.
Taste, a word used without ideas, 67. How to be applied, 68. Common acceptation of it, 179. Mistakes of modern writers about it, 402. The love of moral order the first thing necessary to its attainment, ibid. False pretences to it, 403.
Taylor, Dr. his advertisement, 691.
Tea-chest, description of a new fashioned one, 387.
Tears of old May-day, an elegy, 493.
Theatres, their connection with the Bagnio's, 53.
Theodore, king of Corsica, his character and history, 44.
Thunder and lightening, the manufacture of those commodities how improved by electrical experiments, 498. The advantages of that manufacture if under parliamentary encouragement, ibid. Method of working it, 499. How to split a church steeple with it mathematically solved, 500.
Tillotson, Dr. his observation upon swearing, 552.
Tour to Paris, 104.
Trade, a general excuse for roguery, 1104.
Translators, into the English language, their excellence, page 823.
Travelling, the passion for it how to be cured, 132.
Tully, his employment in retirement, 567.
Turtle-feast, history of one, 740.
Turvey, Thomas, his advertisement, 258.
Tuscany, Duke of, a story of him, 426.
Twist, Mr. how repulsed by the widow G. 462.

V

VANDALS, their refinement in manners, 678.
Vast, vastly, the comprehensive meaning of those words, 607.
Vaux-hall, the master of it, his country house, how provided with entertainment for the mind, 381.
Verses, on the absurdity of not converſing with men in the sciences they profess, 307.
Vertù, its signification, 590.
Vices, of the times, what, 451. Always the same, their modes only varying, 1182.
Villa, a description of one, 88.
Villiers, chevalier de, his passion for his mother, 170. His catastrophe, 171.
Virtue, not secure of immediate happiness, and why, 62. Inseparable from learning, 117. People more likely to be praised into it, than to be railed out of vice, 450. Allegerical situation of its temple at Rome, 1000.
Virtues, the absurdity of concealing them to avoid being laughed at, 1151.
Vis, visit, and visitation, how to be understood, 374.
Visit, the uncertain meaning of that word, 372.
Visiting-cards, how to be written, 375.
Visiter, his revenge upon the Improver, 458. His ingenuity, 460. How to soften him, ibid.
Vivifying drops, their amazing effects, 144.
Vivonne, Duke de, his answer to Louis the XIV. 418.
Vocabulary of new words, the use and necessity of it, 613.
Vocation, no sin to cheat in it, 1104.
Voyage, from Vaux-hall to Whitehall, in a dark night under a tilt, 234.

W.

INDEX.

W

WARD, Dr. the efficacy of his Drop and Pill, page 143.

Warrior, a modern one, poetically described, 1215.

Wash, for the lady's face, a particular one recommended, 879.

Watchmen, their complaints to Mr. Fitz-Adam, 444.

Welch parson, history of one, 436.

Welch uncle, his adventures, 334.

West-India phrases, 615.

Westminster-bridge, an adventure under it, 235.

Whim, a better word for Taste, 68.

Whimsey, lord, his country visit, 372.

Whipping-post, the benefit of it, 273.

Whist, people's behaviour at it censured, 37. The essentials of the game, what, 248.

White's, gentlemen there, their scheme for the advancement of learning, 122.

White Fryars, an order of Monks near St. James's, 163. Difficulties of being admitted into their society, ibid. Their abstinence, pennance, and mortification, ibid.

Wild-goose, a symbol of the fair sex. 400.

Wilson, Mrs. her story, 19. Concluded, 25.

Wirtemburgh, Duke of, his dessert, 36.

Wisdom, the vanity and vexation of it, page 1167.

Witch-act, the mischiefs of its repeal, 203.

Witchcraft, instances of people under its influence, 204.

Witches, by what tokens to know them, 206. How to defeat their fascinations, 207.

Wives, good ones, more numerous than good husbands, 127. Their fitness to govern, 242. How to keep them in good humour, ibid.

Women, how defined, 395.

Women, superior to men in epistolary writing, 86. Their sensations finer and more exquisite, 403.

Words, the abuse or misapplication of them apt to prevert men's morals, 809.

World, design of the paper so called, 5. Various opinions concerning it, 73. Supplemental to the laws, 104.

Writers, of modern romances, their ignorance of life, 113.

Y

YOUNG men of fashion, their exemplary chastity, 489.

Young women, not the proper objects of love, 167.